

Volume integrals

- the "finagling factor" that indicates the amount of stretch done by parametrization is equal to the determinant of the derivative matrix of the parametrization.
- The columns of the derivative matrix represent the images of the line segments making up the unit square/cube in the domain used for the parametrization.